

Dec 21 - In a dream last night I was with President Elect Obama and an older grandmotherly like woman, I assumed it was his grand mother. We got into a limo, like a black Lincoln town car. I was the driver and Obama was in the passenger seat, the woman sat in the seat behind him.

As we drove we were conversing as old friends would. I asked him if he would like me to pray and prophecy over him and he said "I was hoping you would and expecting you to ask." I laid my right hand on his left shoulder as we drove and he laid his head on my right shoulder.

I began to speak in tongues and the tongue which came sounded like one of the southern African !Kung Bushmen dialects with all the "clicks" of that language included. (Note: I have not idea why the Lord chose to use this language from southern Africa his ancestry is from east Africa) I remember thinking as I was praying "I didn't vote for you but I love you with Christ's love." When I was done with the tongue the prophetic word began -"God is stirring things up like a spoon stirring in a cooking pot. Pay attention to what comes to the top, it is important and how it is dealt with will be very important to your success and for many people ..." We came to the end of our drive before the prophecy was complete and he got out on to a black carpet that led to a red one. There he was greeted by a woman who was at the beginning of the red carpet with velvet ropes along the way on polished brass poles like are used at the Grammys and I felt we were at the beginning of the place to go towards the inauguration. He went on without the last part of the prophecy with the grandmother still behind him saying nothing.

I continued with the second portion of the prophecy which was "Dark clouds are arising and will cover the land, but not for as long as many think. And with the dark clouds will come rain, and rain will be for planting and growing and then will come a great harvest time.

Some parts of possible interpretation -

Currently the president elect is open to the input of spiritual leaders even those who may not have voted for him but who are not antagonistic toward him. He will be followed by the influence of his (white) grandmother all of his days and while she may not speak (be noticed by others) her influence will go with him. He did not seem open to this influence, but there is a reason it is following him and perhaps he will open to it in time, it is like a heritage that is with him but being ignored presently/ This is his heritage and an influence which the Lord is showing is there and may influence his presidency although he might not speak of it or acknowledge it.

Our prayers can drive (influence) this portion of time leading up until his inauguration in such a way as to perhaps set foundations and direction which will influence the years after he becomes president. Once he turns on to that carpet of the presidency he may not be as open to our prayers and prophecy as now (because of distractions of the office and responsibilities). What we do, say, pray and proclaim now may have more influence on those days than things we may say after that day (inauguration day). It appears he is open to the things of the spirit but only in passing (as traveling in the car) and not if something else (woman to receive him towards the office of president) is available.

The right hand is the hand of blessing the side representing faith. Left represents human reason and ministry (human action). Shoulders represent government. His head on my right shoulder indicated putting his mind in contact with spiritual faith and ecclesiastical authority. My hand on his shoulder indicates an inspired blessing to the secular governmental authority which would be received at this period of time. Brass also represents the work of man's hands, this is what was part of the receiving line, it looked very good and very important, but was the works of mans hands.

The portion of the prophetic which was not heard by the president elect is what is to come, this may well be a word for the church. That during the dark days just ahead we should be planting - do not get distracted by the words of doom or gloom, it is a time for planting seeds. There will be rain (storms) but not for as long as people expect and are predicting, for those who have planted during the dark days (this is financial as well as evangelism) there will be a great harvest to reap in a time not too long off.

Regarding the Lincoln Town Car -. It was pointed out to me that two days after I had this dream that it was announced that Obama plans to be sworn in with Abraham Lincoln's bible. The headline on Fox News was about Obama "channeling Lincoln". I found this very interesting

I'm happy to hear about Obama's decision to use the Lincoln bible, (actually any bible). This is another indication that he is not a "stealth Muslim". He is trying to be a sincere Christian, and like many in the church today many issues arise from a sincere, but superficial form of Christianity. Rick Warren is scheduled to administer the oath of office. When I was invited to be with Rick Warren this past Spring I was immediately impressed. I later told Terri that I felt he would take the place Billy Graham has filled towards the elected officials (representing the church). I think it is interesting that Barack Obama is setting this precedence. This is most likely the first new precedent that Obama has set.

As a side note George W. Bush was the first president ever NOT to be sworn in on George Washington's bible. The Library of Congress said it was getting too old. So Bush used his own bible. Perhaps by using the Lincoln bible Obama will look back to his roots - both Lincoln and Obama were elected from Illinois.

Also the old woman represented roots and foundations to me. I certainly do not want Obama to have the same end as Abraham Lincoln and end with an assassination I have been praying for his safety through out the election process, and will continue to keep this a priority of prayer. I pray safety for him, although I am praying against many of the things he promised to accomplish since they are anti-Christ or anti-Christian in nature. It is interesting that the Homo-sexual / gay activists have attempted to tie the reforms of Lincoln and the civil rights movement towards to themselves in the past. But the choice of Rick Warren has incised the homosexual community because of what he represents, and has already brought the displeasure of this community against Obama. This is a good thing and again indicates that Obama may not bend on his promise to support marriage as between one man and one woman.

In the dream while Obama was in the Lincoln town car he was expecting to receive prayer and prophetic, but did not want to remain to hear the whole word of the Lord. The bible says the entirety of His word is truth (PS 119:160). If we have half of the word and not all, we will walk in darkness. In the dream when he got out of the car (ignoring that he was in the middle of hearing from the Lord through prophecy) he stepped on to a black carpet. Black can represent repentance, but also might represent darkness, in this case it probably represents stepping into darkness and there was no repentance indicated. The black carpet may represent rejecting or ignoring God's word. We should pray this does not happen. When the carpet turns red as he approached what would be the receiving line. I think this represents the good treatment "rolling out the red carpet". Red carpets are rolled out for celebrities. This seems to be what drew him away prematurely from hearing the word of the Lord in the dream. Often public officials are drawn away by the "spotlight".

In the dream I had the thought "I didn't vote for you but I love you with Christ's love." Obama has stated since the election that he hears the voice of all those who did not vote for him and he would listen. The fact that he didn't stay to hear the rest of the word may indicate that he will not listen carefully to the issues of that portion of the population.

There were brass polls holding up the rope line. It was suggested to me that brass may also represent judgment. I typed the words judgment and brass into my search engine and amazingly the first thing that came up was the words "Obama's Judgment – City of Brass". Brass looks like gold, but can not replace it. It might represent a "shining city" (Washington D.C.?) but it will not be gold, or genuine / godly. We should pray not to be fooled by what is polished but is not gold (it would be fool's gold?).

Both the grandmother and the African dialect may represent the two sides of his heritage. When I wrote about the tongue I had in the dream I said it sounded like one of the southern African !Kung Bushmen dialects with all the "clicks". I did not understand why this would be in the dream, but it was pointed out to me by a linguist (I love linguistics) that there are at least three languages that use these types of dialects in Kenya / East Africa where his fathers heritage hails from.

There may be some interesting insight to be gained from these parts of the dream. It may be that the Lord still has things to be revealed about Obama's African heritage that will be brought forth by God, not Obama, and explained by specialists. I think it is interesting that the Old woman - whom I thought might be his grand mother, representing his American heritage, followed him where ever he went. Another thing about the 'timing' of the dream- it was told me that Obama attended a memorial service for his grandmother just two days after this dream. She has been brought to his mind in memorial, but has truly been laid to rest. She still will go with him (we can not loose our heritage) but it will remain to be seen if she (the American Heritage) can “speak to him” in the future. I will be praying that “she” will.

In the dream I felt the president elect was going towards his inauguration. I did not see him go up the steps and take the oath of office. I intend to pray earnestly through out the tenure of the next president, but this dream may be indicating that much authority can be exercised in prayer in the coming weeks leading up to the next presidency of the United States.

Of course I was in this dream and therefore it may contain specific instructions for me to follow. But also it may be a word for all those who faithfully prayed for another outcome in the election and did not vote for Obama. We have already committed to pray for Obama with love & grace. We do not need to come into agreement with policies or directions in order to pray with grace effectively. We should pray that the Lord will use Obama to bring His will to pass.
